Today we focus on the relationship between self-confidence and strength. In the Activity, the girls explore their beliefs about self-confidence and discuss their opinions. In the Workout, they learn some new and creative ways to strengthen their self-confidence daily. In the Journal, they identify parts of their Girl Wheel where they are strong, how they got that way and how they stay that way.

Key questions to consider as you prepare to lead today: What are your beliefs about self-confidence? What have you done that you didn’t think you could do? How did you feel afterward? How do you build confidence in your personal qualities and judgments? Where are your Girl Wheel strengths? How did you get strong? How do you stay strong?

A healthy self-confidence makes us stronger.

Learning Goals
- Explore beliefs about self-confidence.
- Challenge and revise beliefs about self-confidence.
- Learn strategies for developing healthy self-confidence.
- Identify areas of strength.

Target Life Skills
- Confidence
- Competence
- Character
- Connection

Materials
- Girl Wheel Check-In signs
- Self-Confidence Strategy cards (cut out)
- 4 cones or place markers
- Scissors
- Journals (one for each girl)
- Writing implements

CONNECTION TO GIRL WHEEL
A healthy self-confidence comes from knowing our Girl Wheel, our areas of strength as well as our areas for growth.
CHECK IN
5 MINUTES

Set Up
1. Set up the Girl Wheel Check-In signs as usual.

What is it?
A daily check-in and look ahead at the day's Big Idea. When prompted, girls move quickly to the corresponding part of the Wheel, then back to the center to discuss.

Steps
1. Ask girls to move to the Girl Wheel Check In signs that answer these questions:
   - In what part of the Wheel did you press pause? GGI.
   - Where did you learn something new about yourself? GGI.
   - What would you consider your strongest part of the Wheel? GGI.
2. GGI on what girls remember from last practice. Last practice’s Big Idea: Pressing pause can help us know how to best move forward.
3. Introduce today’s Big Idea: A healthy self-confidence makes us stronger.

POSSIBLE CONNECTORS
Pressing pause gives us a chance to make better decisions. Making better decisions contributes to a healthy self-confidence.
ACTIVITY

Self-Confidence Is...

10-15 MINUTES

Set Up

1. Get out 4 cones or place markers.
2. Place 1 cone 15-20 ft. from coach.
3. Place 3 cones at places coach designates “agree,” “disagree” and “maybe” (see diagram).

Approx. 15-20 feet

(Girls start here.)
What is it?

An activity where coaches pose a series of statements about self-confidence and girls run around a cone and to a location on the line to answer whether they agree or disagree with the statements.

Connection to Big Idea

Knowing what we believe about self-confidence helps us know how to keep it healthy.

Steps

Say, “In this activity I will read you a series of self-confidence statements, and you will decide what you believe about that statement. Then we will talk about the statements. First let’s define self-confidence and talk about why we want a healthy self-confidence.”

1. GGI. What is self-confidence? (Belief in yourself, your abilities and your judgment.)
2. GGI. Why would we want to have a healthy self-confidence? (It allows us to try new things, trust ourselves, make good decisions, etc.)

Explain the activity:

- Tell them you will read a series of self-confidence statements (see below).
- After each statement, they should run to the cone and back while they think about the statement and decide if they Agree, Disagree or Maybe agree with it.
- Once back, they will stand at the Agree, Disagree or Maybe spot on the line that shows their opinion.
- After girls have selected their spots, GGI.
  - Use the coach notes that follow the Self-Confidence Statements to help guide the discussion if needed. Most often girls will raise these points on their own.

Self-Confidence Statements (Coaches, choose five statements, or as many as time allows, from the following.)

1. Doing something you didn’t think you could can help your self-confidence.
   (Stretching yourself, taking risks, and trying new things can build self-confidence.)

2. Your self-confidence comes from how many friends you have.
   (What matters with friends—quality or quantity? While friends can relate to self-confidence, they are not the only factor. Connect to the Girl Wheel.)

3. Failing or making mistakes lowers your self-confidence.
   (Everyone makes mistakes. Everyone fails at some point. Failure in one part of our life doesn’t mean failure in all parts. Connect to the Girl Wheel.)
4. Music, TV and social media have nothing to do with your self-confidence.
(There are a lot of messages that are obvious and not so obvious about girls and women in the media that can have a positive or negative affect on self-confidence. What are the messages you are receiving in music, TV and social media? How do they make you feel about yourself?)

5. Your body type, height, hair, weight, etc., are all part of your self-confidence.
(For many young women, their self-confidence is mainly tied to their physical appearance, although this is only a part of who they are. Connect to the Girl Wheel. What section of the Wheel is the Body? Only 1/5th!)

6. The things you say to yourself can change your self-confidence.
(Both positive and negative self-talk can affect self-confidence. Who do you spend the most time with anyway? Yourself! So be nice to you!)

7. Criticizing others raises your self-confidence because you feel better about yourself.
(Does putting someone down really raise your self-confidence or only temporarily make you feel superior?)

8. Breaking up with someone can hurt self-confidence.
(Changes in personal relationships can have an effect on self-confidence, but it’s only a part of who we are. Connect to the Girl Wheel.)

STRENGTH & CONDITIONING

Circuit 1:

Girl Led

Set Up

1. Ask a volunteer to help lead girls through four cold warm-up exercises and strength and conditioning Circuit 1 (see Introduction).
WORKOUT Self-Confidence Strategies

30 MINUTES (5 MIN. PREP/ 20 MIN. WORKOUT/ 5 MIN. COOL DOWN & LAP GOALS)

Set Up

1. Get out your Self-Confidence Strategy cards.
2. Get out the journals and writing implements.
3. After instructions are given:
   - One coach will stand at the lap start line and hand out strategies.
   - One coach will be at the lap finish collecting strategies and checking in with girls.

What is it?

A workout where girls collect self-confidence strategies on each lap and decide whether or not they might try them out in life.

Connection to Big Idea

Self-confidence can be strengthened through specific strategies and practice.

Steps

Say, “Self-confidence can be strengthened through practice! You’ll learn some strategies for building self-confidence during today’s workout and decide if you might try them out or not.”

1. Explain the activity:
   - Tell girls they will pick up a self-confidence strategy at the beginning of each lap.
   - As they run, they should consider the strategy or talk about it with someone. Might I try this out in my life?
   - At the end of the lap, the girl will hand in the strategy and let a coach know if she would definitely try it (thumbs up), maybe try it (thumbs middle) or definitely not try it (thumbs down).
   - Then she will pick up another strategy card and repeat the process.

2. Provide an example of a self-confidence strategy (see example).
3. After the workout, lead girls through some cool-down stretches (see Introduction).
4. Hand out journals and have girls fill out today’s entry in the My Lap Goals and Progress page.

Tips & Tricks

GIVE GIRLS RESPONSIBILITIES
At this point, girls should be able to pass out journals, etc. Have girls rotate this responsibility.

GGI
At the end of the lap, coaches might ask girls to explain their decisions to increase the processing.

EXAMPLE
“Stand up for someone who needs it.” GGI. Why is this a self-confidence strategy? (I feel better about myself when I stand up for someone.)
JOURNAL

10-15 MINUTES

Girl Wheel. I’m Strong.

Set Up

1. Have girls sit in a circle with their journals and writing implements.

Steps

Say, “Let’s identify some strengths in our Girl Wheel since knowing our strengths is a good self-confidence strategy.”

1. Have girls open to Journal entry 7.
2. GGI. How is knowing or identifying our strengths related to self-confidence?
3. Tell girls you want them to identify two parts of their Wheel where they are already strong. Ask them to be as specific as possible about their strength in these areas. They can write examples, draw pictures, etc.
   - Give an example or two that is relevant to your girls (see example).
4. Give them about five minutes to think and write.
5. GGI. Who wants to share?
   - How does being strong in these areas allow you to try something new? Trust yourself more? Make good decisions?
   - How does knowing your strengths help you in your life? If it doesn’t already, how could it?

tips & TRICKS

GIRL WHEEL

We want to identify strengths and eventually build strengths in all parts of the Wheel so girls will have the strength to know how to act, get the help they need and extend the reach of their Girl Wheel to positively impact others.

GIRL WHEEL DETAILS

Refer girls to “Get to Know Your Girl Wheel” to help them remember the details of the Wheel.

EXAMPLE

I am strong in Spirit because I know my dreams and I never give up on them. I am strong in Heart because I do a great job dealing with stress by talking with someone.

LET GIRLS LEAD

Consider having a girl lead this Let’s Talk.
Take one minute or so to help girls synthesize. Use the key points below.

Key Points

- Knowing our strengths helps us continue to build them up and add to them.
- Knowing our Girl Wheel strengths gives us the confidence to reach out to others.
- Learning about others’ areas of strength can teach us about our own growth.

WRAP UP AND TAKE HOME CHALLENGE

Steps

1. CONGRATULATE girls on a great day.
2. GGI, “Who remembers today’s Big Idea?” (A healthy self-confidence makes us stronger.)
3. Ask for volunteers to share their favorite thing that had the most impact.
4. TAKE HOME CHALLENGE: Practice some of the self-confidence strategies at home. See how it goes!
5. CLOSING RITUAL. Connect and celebrate!

EXTENSION?

Consider asking girls if they have ever felt that their strength in an area has been limited by being a girl. “You’re strong, for a girl.” “You’re fast, for a girl.” “You’re smart, for a girl.”
